ACHI OUTLINES GOLDEN DREAM

Distributes County Coin With Lavish Hand

Achi's plans for securing more money for the County and the methods which he has outlined for spending it were given out at the meeting of the Home Rule-Laborites at Paoon last evening, according to the Labor leader himself, for the first time. There can be no doubt but that Achi has managed to concoct a plan which to the casual listener would seem very tempting indeed, and the shrewd speaker was granted considerable applause last night as he unfolded his rosyate dreams to the devoted followers. Achi first outlined the plan, which is contained in his platform, providing that the County shall have sixty and the Territory only forty per cent of the total taxes. The difficulties which this change might involve he airily blew aside with the general remark that the Territorial officials were overpaid, and that a great many of their occupied utterly unnecessary positions. He also wanted the entire revenue received from license fees paid to the County, and in this connection introduced a plan to have the merchandise license law changed, so that in the future every business house would pay a license fee in proportion to the gross annual business done by it. In this way, the statesman explained, the rich would be taxed as they should be while, as it was at present, the small corner grocery man had to pay as high a license as the big firms, which did a million dollars worth of business a year. It was, however, when he reached the part of his speech wherein he dealt with the disposal of all these additional funds to be acquired by the County that Achi reached a line of entirely new ideas, at least they had never before been given to the public. A general raise of the pay of the department employees under the County was the first vote-getting lure. The first-ladies speaker wanted to humor by raising their pay from $65 to $70 a month, and in addition to this he wanted to increase their number by twelve new men, the object being to provide the women with a holiday once every eight days, while at present they have a holiday only once in twelve days. The band boys were the next whose hearts were to be made happy. Achi proposed to raise the pay of each member on an average of 25, and he also proposed to add some men to the organization. The band, he said, might be regarded as a good investment, a besides providing pleasure for the rest population, it contributed to the enjoyment of the tourists. The police department would, shortly Achi's dreams come true, be given an additional appropriation of $500 a month from the general fund, and in addition to this each of the districts would be given the fines and costs collected in its district court, this money to be expended as an incidental fund for pay of detectives, informers, witnesses fees, etc., all such expenditures, he said, however, subject to the approval of the Board of Supervisors. The crowning glory of Achi's vision was a plan to build roads up all the valleys in the vicinity of Honolulu, Kalahehi, Paoon, Manoa and Palolo, which could be used for the people for trips to the mountains on Sundays and holidays. At the end of each of these roads Achi proposed to establish parks, each provided with a rest house in which the excursionists could eat their lunches and make themselves at home. Achi's speech was the main feature of the meeting, which was held in a lecture hall of a way by a steam roller standing on the mauka Paoon road. The attendance was scattering many women and children being included in the crowd, which in all did not number a hundred persons. Old man Kalahehi made the first speech of the evening and probably broke all records for length for his campaign. He was talking when he meeting started at 7:30 o'clock and it was about 8:15 when he finally ceased. His speech was, like all the others, in Hawaiian, and was said to be quite well handled. Among the other speakers were Admiral Beckley, who dwelt on the records of his ancestors as chiefs and warriors, and on that of himself as a member of the Kilauea. The Admiral was a busy man both before and after his speech distributing leaflets asking for votes among those present. Charlie Dotley spoke dealing on the subjects contained in the Home Rule platform in a general way, while Kalahehi, Vida, Mauna, and others also contributed their mites.

LINDSAY REMOVES MAKAELE GUARDIAN

Judge Lindsay this morning disposed of another incompetent guardian when he removed Abe Kaleikan as guardian of the Makaele minors and appointed R. H. Trent in his stead. Trent's bond was fixed at $200. Kaleikan mismanaged the small estate belonging to his youthful trusts in a shameful manner, it is alleged, at one time loaning the sum of $275 to his relatives without the slightest security. Judge Lindsay is dealing with this sort of trustee or guardian in the right manner, not tolerating anything but smacks of the illegitimate in the handling of an estate. California Marksmen won the state and individual championships in the competition of the United States revolver association.
